Langhorne Creek,
a magical moment
in the Fleurieu Peninsula.

LANGHORNE CREEK

Fleurieu Peninsula

Ideal climate, flavour filled wines ...

The historic winemaking region of Langhorne Creek is less than an hours drive from Adelaide.

Langhorne Creek is traditionally a red wine grape region best known for its full bodied Cabernet Sauvignon and Shiraz.

We have a surprisingly cool climate that also allows production of exceptionally flavoured white and fortified wines.

The original vineyards adjacent to the Bremer River experience natural floods from rain that falls in the Adelaide Hills.

The soils are deep alluvial sandy loams, which receive a deposit of silts and nutrients with each flood.

Langhorne Creek labelled wines enjoy success locally, nationally and in the competitive world export market.

As old as our pioneers, as young as the exciting new generation of winemakers...

The name 'Langhorne Creek' acknowledges Alfred Langhorne, a cattle drover, who brought cattle overland to a property known as 'Langhorne's Station' during the 1840s.

Frank Potts, travelling through the region, recognised the potential of the area and settled in 1850 on the ancient flood plain created by the Bremer and Angas Rivers.

He planted the first grapes in the district in the 1860s at the now heritage listed Bleasdale Winery

Today there are approximately 6000 hectares of vines and a new generation of winemakers. Featuring seven family owned cellar doors, several offering food and coffee, Langhorne Creek offers an enticing destination for visitors.

Spend a day or a long weekend enjoying the rich experiences of “the Peninsula” without scratching the surface.

Just don't miss Langhorne Creek, one of Australia's oldest and most significant winemaking districts.

A scenic gateway to the Fleurieu Peninsula...

Langhorne Creek is situated in a beautiful corner of the world – near Lake Alexandrina and the stunning south coast of South Australia.

Plan a day or stay longer in this delightful Fleurieu region, visiting wineries, country pubs, antique stores and historic sites.

Picnic under majestic River Red Gums, stretch your legs at the tranquil Frank Potts Reserve or make time to visit an 'Australian icon' – Newman's Horseradish Farm.

A few days escape at a local Bed and Breakfast is sure to revive the senses.

Just don't miss Langhorne Creek.
